IL PRINCIPE RANOCCHIO E L'APE TITO

Nespolo Lo Giullare

By and with

Manuel Bruttomesso

Whether he's a prince transformed into a frog and destined to wander from place to place in search of a princess capable of freeing him from the magic, or a late fifteenth century juggler convinced he is a frog and ready to exploit any event just to steal a kiss, he'll win you over with his theatrical tricks. And, as if the the eccentric acrobatics and the topsy-turvy juggling were not enough, you'll fall under his spell with the poetry of Dante and Lentini. For those who've been won over by his irresistible, disarming comic charm, Nespolo Lo Giullare then offers a second helping. He changes his stage costume and the hero of the piece becomes the Ape Tito – or Titus the Bee, intent on fluttering about all over the place. One thing is certain: he'll keep you company whatever you are doing, alternating his activities of buzzing around with unexpected animations.

Nespolo Lo Giullare is a clown, a juggler, a tightrope walker and an acrobat, as well as an actor. His theatrical training took place in Italy and France, with famous names such as Jango Edwards, Philip Radice and Marcel Marceau at the Paris Academy. The main theme of his artistic research is the insertion of the juggler archetype into daily life. He offers medieval-style shows that are the result of deep study into the documented development of this theme, as well as surreal comic characters of his own invention – such as the Rinconiglio, Cercamon the Fox, the Hunchback prophet, Titus the Bee, and the Frog Prince – involving clowning, juggling, high balancing acts and a great deal of interaction with the public.
